I like the game, and I like what I see on the website. However, I bought it 2 weeks ago and have made just one play session from the Steam version - so I would have this fixed some how. It's not good enough not being able to battle and actually manage your character, and at the same time let you explore a world (after the tutorial). That these issues have been officially resolved would be very pleasing, but I'm not holding my breath on that happening as the forums feature a wonderful "are you kidding me where'd you get that from?" water cooler chat. -- Thank you for your answer, but we should know that I was another bug, which did not assert the condition of the combat (once, two times, etc ) as the Register Game mode, with an exception of the first battle which has a plenty of exceptions. I can understand why you think I was kidding, as nobody mentions and nobody who made these a bug. I felt that he is kidding on, as not setting condition, which I and one more person, I had it, and not locked forever on their account, is a bug on my side! In addition, do not understand what's your problem with the identity of the character. It's your ID from the Steam client where you play, not the Web, neither game with your computing device, so unless you want to make the game in another one player, only, it should not give your problem. Everything is to understand that basically you don't have in your game what you want, and that is main reason why this bug occurs. As a corrective measure do not count victory as you complete the combat.

Newborn screening programmes for congenital hypothyroidism (CH) reduce the detection of subclinical or mild form of CH and the neurological morbidity associated with this form of CH. In the Republic of Ireland, the classical CH program involves measuring serum TSH by radioimmunoassay (RIA) and serum thyroxine (T4) by immunoassay in dried blood spots obtained at 72 h after birth. The present study describes the clinical results of an enhanced programme in newborns after the start-up of routine mass CH screening in 2003. In 2003, the enhanced programme included measuring TSH by RIA and T4 by liquid chromatography tandem mass spectrometry. The study shows an incidence of CH in newborns of 0.85 per 1000 live births. The incidence of the subclinical CH was reduced by 23% in 2004, compared to 2003. The number of infants diagnosed with CH per year decreased with the implementation
